MASTER'S DEGREE PROGRAMS IN GLOBAL CULTURES

Missional University offers master's degrees that combine a vocational focus with a culturally or geographically contextual one. By incorporating cultural studies, religious studies, cultural anthropology, anthropology of art and music, cultural geography, ethnomusicology, folk studies, and international visual communications, students learn not only the "what, why and how" of their academic discipline, but they also learn about the "with whom" and "where" in which their missional practice is implemented.

WHY GLOBAL STUDIES?

In today's world, people are interconnected around the world – socially, politically, economically. Connections increase exponentially because of the growth of transnational organizations, global trade, and communication technology. In this environment, the people of God are called to be global citizens – to serve in the mission of God in ways that impact the world physically, socially, culturally, and spiritually. By joining where God is already at work, Christians become global missionizers.
